Hi Scott,

The first attached photo is one of ours; I really like it because of the mountain backdrop, but may too small of me (?). The next is a psychology photo that I'm sure we can use. The the third attachment is a chronicle of adolescent limited eccentricity that you can use in any way you think fit (!).

I would like these pictures to be in the public domain.

Best, JOhn

Hi John,

In my official role as faculty media liaison I'd like to get a picture of you up on your wikipedia page.

Wikipedia is very serious about copyright, so I can't just copy a good picture of you from the web. If you have a picture that you like, ideally one that you or Christina have taken (so you own copyright), please send it along with a statement that you would like the picture to be in the public domain. Then I can put it on your wikipedia page and reference your email in support of it.

BTW, if you've never looked, here's your page:

I know this kind of promotion can seem silly, but I say we give it a try! Unfortunately, you're the only one of us who is noteworthy enough to have your own wikipedia page...
